There were people named Meek in the United States as early as 1647. They came from England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. They represented many unrelated families with names such as Meek, Meeks, Meeke and Meik.

The purpose of this paper is to present an overview of people named Meek(s) living in the United States before, during and shortly after the Revolutionary War. The focus is primarily on earliest known ancestors and is not a list of all descendants within Meek(s) families. However, it is assumed that the majority of men living in the U. S. during that period will be found within these families. Some familiar Meek names are not listed here because there is no tangible evidence that they lived in the United States or in some cases even existed. There are many families named Meek in the British Isles who never migrate to America or did not migrate until after 1800. Many early Meek families left few if any male progeny or they died out altogether.

The Meek name developed independently in different locations of England, Wales and Scotland when surnames were mandates in the 13th century. The name probably never had a consistent spelling but was commonly spelled Meek or Meeke in England and Meik or Meyk in Scotland. The spelling Meeks also became common during this time. The reason this name was picked was probably as varied as the different families that adopted it.

It is not clear who the first immigrant to the United States named Meek was. His name is probably lost to history. On 1 Dec 1647 the will of Robert Meeke was probated in York Co., VA. There is no information about his sons or descendants. There are names similar to Meek in earlier records. However, it is impossible to know if these are misspelling of the name Meek or separate surnames in their own right with different origins. In most cases there is little or no genealogical information.

Guy Meeke lived in Ann Arundel Co., MD before 1662. He was the progenitor of a large family of descendants in Maryland and Virginia. This is one of the earliest Meek families for which there is genealogical information. By the time of the Revolutionary War many different Meek(s) families could be found throughout the colonies.

Genealogies of Canadian families named Meek are becoming more available. It is known that some early U. S. families who were loyalist during the Revolution moved to Canada. Shortly after the Revolution families moved across the border between the U. S. and Canada in both directions. It is not known when the first settler named Meek came to Canada.

1 This is based on various genealogical histories. There is no proven record of the name in any other country before the use of surnames in England. Similar names such as Meck, Mick and Mock have German origins. Most surname directories simply discuss the origins of the adjective “meek” which does little to tell us about the use of the word as a surname.
2 There are other variations but one must distinguish spellings in records from actual names used.
3 A major example is Adam Meek born 1640 in Lincolnshire, England and his son Jacob born 1698. Contrary to popular belief there is no evidence that Jacob ever came to America and it has been proven that he did not father the children attributed to him.
4 Based on different DNA profiles which prove the name Meek is not monolithic.

Evidence of people working on Meek genealogies in the United States is very minimal before 1900. After that date books began appearing in libraries and genealogies were being circulated between genealogists. Still it was difficult for all but few people to do comprehensive research or even know what information was available. Unfortunately incorrect genealogies were circulated and many inexperienced genealogist have now spent a life time following the wrong leads.

Today the Internet has exposed the world to a wealth of hard data as well as other people’s genealogies. Unfortunately it has also exploded the number of incorrect genealogies available and in some ways a new genealogist today is in a far more difficult situation than his parents were. Many people entering data in online databases have no clue how to do genealogy and simply copy other people’s genealogy without regard to their accuracy.

Fortunately, within the last few years a new source has became available that is helping sort out some of the misinformation. It also has the potential of helping with one of the more difficult problem in Meek genealogy. That is finding a connection prior to immigration to the U. S.

The Meek/Meeks Family Y-DNA Project\(^7\) was started in November 2004. Combined with traditional genealogical research it is a powerful tool for exploring ones ancestors and sorting out the mountain of bad information confronting genealogists. With over 200 members the project has disproven some traditional genealogies and found connections between early ancestors that were not even guessed at in the past. One group recently made a connection to a family in Scotland that has a genealogy that pre-dates the family in the United States. In another group proven genealogies in some families confirmed family lore in others concerning a connection to Ireland. As the project grows the possibilities for discovery also grow.

One focus of the DNA project has been to identify which Revolutionary War era ancestors were related and which were not. The ancestors listed in this paper are grouped by DNA results, geographic location and/or date they were born and lived. All people within a given DNA project group are related. The unanswered questions are how they are related and when the connection occurred. By the same token people in different groups definitely are not related.

Most of the people in the United States named Meek or Meeks who have had a DNA test fall into the haplogroup\(^8\) R-P311 and subclades with only a few exceptions\(^9\). More importantly 75% of the members of the Meek/Meeks DNA Project can be associated with seven groups of pre 1800 United States ancestors and a number of unconnected individual ancestors\(^10\). These early immigrants named Meek(s) were followed by many others from the early 1800’s up to the present.

There is no single source for finding Meek genealogies. However a fairly significant collection has been made available on the Internet by this author\(^11\). It is not the last word in Meek genealogies but it gives a good view of the scope of people named Meek, especially before 1800. Other collections are available on the Internet. One should be extremely cautious with any family

There are many incorrect genealogies available today. Some of the worst have been copied the most. Just because everyone appears to be saying the same thing does not mean they are correct. It just means they all copied the same bad genealogy.

This writer has researched the names Meek and Meeks for over 50 years. With all due humility this effort is put forward to share knowledge. This writer effort, like all genealogists, is subject to incomplete data, incorrect interpretations and outright mistakes. However, it is one of the few attempts in history to compile a comprehensive list of families named Meek or Meeks.

The families presented here include most known Meek/Meeks families from official records not just those that have been DNA tested. As the existence of an individual becomes known through official records he will be added to the list. One should always assume that this list is incomplete.
This is a small group of ancestors two of whom were known to have been born in Maryland according to pension records. The oldest was Jeremiah Meeks who died in Westmoreland Co., PA in 1783. Deed records suggest that his sons were named John, Jeremiah and Joshua. Joshua is the only one that can be traced from Westmoreland County.

Group B3

Group B3b
This group involves descendants of John Meeks (1700-1772) who resided in Pitt Co., NC. Documentation for his sons and grandsons is sparse and very confusing. Five members of the DNA project claim descent from two of the listed sons. The DNA profile clearly indicates a unique ancestry that is different from but related to Group B. There was a man named James Meeks in this area as early as 1727. He purchased land in 1747 that land was sold by John Meeks in 1757.

Son: John Meeks (1739- ) Lived Pitt Co., NC.

Thomas Meeks (1768-1825) lived in Monongalia Co., VA. He married Elizabeth Susannah George about 1793 in Maryland. His connection to the Pitt County group is unclear but it does not appear that he was a descendant of John Meeks. Given his location he may represent a different branch of the common ancestor’s family that may have resided in Maryland.

Group B3a

MD/VA/TN/MS

George B. Meek (1785- ) Born in Maryland he moved to Shenandoah Co., VA. He was listed in the 1850 census of Pontotoc Co., MS. He married Catherine Everly. Group B of the DNA project also includes three other members who trace their family back to Baltimore, MD about 1820. It is not clear how closely these four men were related. DNA indicates they had similar to but different from Group B3. Maryland has long been thought to be the home of both Group B1 and B3.

Son: George Meek ( - )
Son: William F. Meek (1819- ) Lived Pontotoc Co., MS.
Son: Oscar Meek (1820- ) Lived Pontotoc Co., MS.

Contrary to many genealogies it is highly unlikely John and Thomas were sons of Guy Meek.

The Meek/Meeks Family of the United States

Given the state of records in the early United States it is likely that the list of men named Meek and Meeks presented here is not complete. Unverified genealogies have not been used as sources for this article. Given the number of fictitious Meek genealogy that are known to exist everyone should use caution in using undocumented genealogies.

The number of families in The United States named Meek and Meeks increased significantly after 1800. It is assumed that this was due to increased immigration following the Revolutionary War. It is also assumed that some of the families that appear in the records after 1800 will be found to have descended from one of the known ancestors listed above. Some will be found to represent as yet unidentified groups. It is also possible that some people named Meek or Meeks today descend from a line where the surname changed at some point in history.

Disclaimer: This information was prepared by the author using some undocumented and/or unverified sources. Some facts presented here MAY NOT be correct. Never accept as factual any information you find in a library, the Internet or from other genealogist unless it is supported by documentation. Documentation DOES NOT include the undocumented genealogies of other people including those in this article.

Any conclusions regarding relationships that are based on DNA results are also dependent on the validity of the genealogical information. In most cases multiple DNA tests from different branches of the same family are desirable.

Explanation of group designations

Y-DNA is passed down from father to son and thus follows the surname. Relatedness of different individuals is demonstrated by the pattern of “short tandem repeat” or STR marker values. In most cases people with the same surname who share a similar STR pattern can be considered to share a common ancestor. Who that ancestor was and when he lived is not revealed by DNA. That is a matter for genealogy. Bear in mind the “Meek/Meeks” surname is probably not much more than 800 years old.

Each DNA group title also has a haplogroup designation. All men in the world can be divided into haplogroups which are defined by a specific DNA mutation known as a “single nucleotide polymorphism” or SNP. SNP mutations occur very slowly thus anyone related to a given male within hundreds of years will have the same SNP mutation. However, having the same SNP mutation does not signify a relationship within genealogical timeframes. Absent a SNP test major haplogroups can be predicted using STR markers, a large percentage of men of European descent fall into the “R” haplogroup. More than 90% of the men in the Meek/Meeks DNA project are in the “R” haplogroup.

The designations listed in this article are largely subgroups within the “R” haplogroup such as R-P312. Some SNP are a subset, child or descendant of another SNP such R-L21 which is a subset SNP of R-P312. The age of SNPs range from about 2000 years to more than 20,000 years. Consequently a person with a designation of R-L21 would not be considered related to someone with the designation of R-S14328 although they both descend from R-P311. This is why a person in one DNA group presented here could not possibly be related in any meaningful sense of the word to a person in another DNA group. This knowledge allows genealogists to narrow their search for the earliest known ancestor to a smaller group of men named Meek(s).

A large number of known early American ancestors named Meek(s) are represented in the DNA project. But there may have been other who left smaller footprints. In addition in most cases there were relatives left in Europe who did not migrate to the United States or migrated later in time. DNA is an important fact to add to ones collection of data. However, it does not prove a connection in and of itself. Genealogical proof is required.
